Foreword

GB/T 33045-2026 is a recommended national standard (GB/T) of the People's Republic of China, issued on 28 August 2026 by the State Administration for Market Regulation and the Standardization Administration of China, with effect from 1 March 2027.

This edition replaces GB/T 33045-2016.

It is under the responsibility of the All-China Federation of Supply and Marketing Cooperatives.

Classification: ICS 67.180.10; CCS B47.

1 Scope

This standard concerns comb honey, honey that is sold in the wax comb in which bees stored it. It is intended for beekeepers, honey packers and processors, distributors, food safety and quality control staff, and importers or retailers who need a common national reference for this product. The 2026 edition was issued on 28 August 2026 and takes effect on 1 March 2027, replacing GB/T 33045-2016. As a recommended national standard, it is applied by agreement, through product specifications, or through company quality systems rather than as a general legal mandate. Producers and buyers dealing with Chinese comb honey can use it to describe product quality in a consistent way. It was prepared under the responsibility of the All-China Federation of Supply and Marketing Cooperatives, and it belongs to the area of food products from bees.
