Introduction

Second-hand goods consumption is an important manifestation of green and healthy consumption: In recent years, the annual transaction volume of second-hand goods in my country has maintained rapid growth:

With the trend, its circulation has gradually expanded from simply serving residents' lives to serving corporate production and operations: Second-hand goods transactions have gradually shifted from mainly providing daily necessities to Gradually it expanded to include equal emphasis on both the means of living and the means of production: At present, our country's social products have not yet reached a great level of richness, and the development of the second-hand goods market it is suitable for the national conditions, especially the poverty alleviation of tens of millions of rural people and the development of the western region, and provides broad prospects for the development of my country's second-hand goods market:

my country's second-hand cross-border trade market started late, the market layout lacks overall planning, and the relevant regulatory system is not perfect, which is dangerous Second-hand goods that are harmful to the environment may still enter the market of other countries, causing health and safety risks and waste management issues in the importing country, which is harmful to us:

It has a negative impact on the country's national image, product quality, and trade reputation:

The formulation of this document will provide a generally applicable standard for improving the technical requirements for health, safety, environmental performance and quality of second-hand goods:

Therefore, providing consumers with technical testing and reliability guarantees will help standardize the cross-border trade market for second-hand goods and help improve the cross-border trade of second-hand goods:

Trade standardization level, further improve the national standard system for cross-border trade, and promote the development of my country's second-hand goods export trade:
