Foreword

GB/T 48085-2026 is a recommended national standard (GB/T) of the People's Republic of China, issued on 28 August 2026 by the State Administration for Market Regulation and the Standardization Administration of China, with effect from 1 September 2027.

It is under the responsibility of the China General Chamber of Commerce.

Classification: ICS 67.220.10; CCS X66.

1 Scope

This standard provides a general rule for the quality of seasoning alcohol, known in China as liaojiu, a cooking wine used to flavour food during preparation. It forms part of a group of condiment quality rules issued by the same body on the same date.

The document is relevant to manufacturers and bottlers of cooking wine, quality assurance and laboratory staff, retailers, food service buyers, and importers or distributors of Chinese seasonings. A general quality rule offers a common reference when companies set product specifications or discuss quality with customers and suppliers.

The standard was issued on 28 August 2026 and takes effect on 1 September 2027. It is a recommended national standard (GB/T), meaning it is voluntary unless cited in a contract or other binding document. Anyone who needs the specific quality provisions should consult the full text, as this summary describes only the general purpose of the document and its intended audience.
